BULGARS CUT OFF SERVIAN RETREAT

Sofia Dispatch Says Bulgarian Force Suddenly Appears In Servian Rear

TURKS SEIZE THE OPPORTUNITY

Want Lost Territory Back and Prepare to Take Up Arms to Enforce Request

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 8.—Turkey will fight. The sublime porte today decided to reoccupy the territory which was taken over by the Balkan allies as a result of the London peace treaty signed in May. This means that the Turks will have to enter the territory by force and preparations are being made for the invasion against Bulgaria.

LONDON, July 8.—The complete success of the Bulgarian force which appeared at Vranja in the rear of the Servian line yesterday was claimed today in dispatches from Sofia. It is declared that the Bulgarians entered the city, captured huge quantities of ammunition and proceeded northward along the Morava river, being successful in every maneuver to cut off the Servian retreat.

An unconfirmed report received here that Turkey has demanded that Bulgaria evacuate that part of the ottoman empire which went to the Balkan allies according to the terms of the peace treaty signed in May, has added to the complication of the situation. The Turkish troops are preparing to take the field, according to this report.

Advices from Bucharest declare that the Roumanian army will be mobilized by Thursday or Friday. It is expected immediately to invade Bulgaria.

BLAME HER LOVER FOR GIRL'S DEATH

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 8.—Charged with the brutal murder of his pretty sweetheart, Alice Crispwell, aged 18, Herbert Johns, aged 28, stoutly denied responsibility for the tragic death of Miss Crispwell in Harvey's lake on the night of Fourth of July.

Johns and the girl have been lovers for a long time. July 4 he left this city to visit her at Harvey's Lake, where she was employed. He was last seen with her that night, but returned to this city early. When the girl did not return to her home, it was thought she was staying with her employers. When a letter reached the Crispwell home from Herbert Johns addressed to Alice, the girl's father became alarmed and instituted a search. Cottagers pointed out where they heard a girl's frantic screams for help on the night of the 4th. Later the body of the girl was found floating on the water. Johns was immediately suspected and last night placed under arrest. He refused to talk but today denied the crime.

SAYS THE FATE OF LOBBY IS SEALED

Senator Reed of Missouri Declares Investigation Has Proved Long-suspected Control

INTERESTS ACTIVE IN POLITICS

Declares They Have Opposed Men for Election and Aided Their Friends to Office

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Senator Reed of Missouri, chief cross-examiner for the senate lobby investigating committee, today analyzed for the United Press the evidence taken so far by that committee and gave what he believes will be the results of these disclosures:

(By James A. Reed, U. S. Senator from Missouri.)

The lobby investigation and its attendant disclosures have demonstrated what has long been suspected:

That the great special interests have secretly and effectively directed and controlled legislation. I do not mean that all legislation has been thus controlled, but that the interests have been a potential influence is beyond question. Evidence plainly shows:

First, that they have opposed the election of men known to be opposed to their plans and desires.

Second, that they have secretly given aid and support, financial and moral, to those who have been subservient to their interests.

Third, that they have carefully and secretly affected public sentiment through carefully prepared news matter sent out through the press of the country.

Fourth, that with great skill they have carried on a propaganda with their business connections and by this means sought to influence the votes of congressmen.

Tried to Control Congress.

Fifth, that they have maintained lobbyists in Washington whose business it has been not only to undertake to direct a course of legislation and to oppose all inimical legislation, but to undertake to control the election of the committees of congress.

Sixth, in one instance at least, one of these interests, the woolen manufacturers, succeeded in having appointed as confidential clerk of the republican members of the finance committee of the senate, the secretary of the Woolen Manufacturers' association, who performed his work so satisfactorily that he was presented by his employers, the wool manufacturers, with $6,000.

Seventh, that the sugar interests of Hawaii, Porto Rico, Louisiana, and the beet sugar interests have made common cause to prevent a reduction of the tariff on sugar.

Eighth, that there is a community of interests between many of the protected industries and that there has been raised and expended directly and indirectly for the purpose of controlling public sentiment and affecting legislation many thousands of dollars.

Every day is bringing new developments. Gradually the facts are being laid before the public. No one can predict exactly what may yet be developed, but as a result of this investigation, these things will happen:

Influence Doomed.

"The work of the lobbyist having been exposed, he will be discredited and his influence gradually lessened. In my opinion lobbyists will be required to register and to present themselves before a committee of congress in their true character."

94 PER CENT VOTE FOR RAIL STRIKE

Eastern Railroads Are Delivered Ultimatum of the Trainmen and Conductors Today

DEMAND INCREASE IN WAGES

Men Will Make Usual Appeal for Arbitration but Employers Will Resist

NEW YORK, July 8.—Ninety-four per cent of the conductors and trainmen on the eastern railroads have voted in favor of a strike unless their demands for increased wages are granted. This was the announcement made today by Representatives of the employes who met the conference committee of railway managers to discuss the demands.

4,210 Against Strike

According to the count of the ballots announced to the railway managers, 76,683 men voted, and of this number only 4,210 were opposed to a strike. Of the conductors voting 89 per cent favored a strike and 98 per cent of the trainmen favored similar action.

The usual appeal for arbitration of the differences under the Erdman act will be made by the conductors and trainmen but the railroads will resist such a settlement. The railway managers insist that the men are now getting a fair wage and that they cannot stand an increase at this time. The increase demand will add $7,000,000 annually to the payrolls of the 42 roads, the managers assert.

Although the danger of a strike is not regarded as imminent, it is admitted that such a strike as the conductors and trainmen have voted if in calling, would be one of the most disastrous of the country. The railroads object to arbitration under the Erdman act on the ground that the commission provided for under this law is not of sufficient membership. In the end, they declare, the settlement of the issue is left in the hands of one man and they contend this responsibility is too great.

Emergency Bill

A movement is now said to be on foot for an emergency bill in congress to increase the membership of the arbitration board. If such a law is enacted, it is declared the railroads will have no objection to submitting the question for arbitration.

AGED WOMAN AT HEAD OF PARADE

Only Living Person Who Saw Commodore Perry in 1813 Leads the School Children

ERIE, Pa., July 8.—The only person now living who saw Commodore Oliver Edward Hazard Perry, enter Erie 100 years ago to superintend construction of his fleet, rode in an automobile here today at the head of 12,000 school children. It was Mrs. Eliza Ann Warner, 103.

"Of course I was too little to remember Perry," said Mrs. Warner. "But in a vague way I recollect the excitement his arrival caused and my father often told me how he and I and the entire family went to the commodore's reception."

Today was Mother's and Children's day in Erie's Perry centennial celebration. Two hundred suffragettes, members of the Northwestern Equal Franchise association, joined in the children's parade.

Pickpockets working among the crowds that are daily visiting Perry's flagship Niagara, have reaped a harvest according to the police.

TO RUSH CHARGE

WASHINGTON, July 8.—With a strike of trainmen on eastern railroads imminent democratic leaders in the house planned next Monday to rush through the bill increasing the size of the mediation board under the Erdman law. The senate has already passed such a bill. The measure proposes to substitute an arbitration board of nine for the three members now authorized.

JANESVILE HAS RECALL

JANESVILLE, Wis., July 8.—The first primary for nomination of a city official under the recall provision of the commission form of city government is in progress here today. Wallace W. Nash, a retired business man, seeks the nomination for mayor on the recall ticket and is opposed by John C. Nichols, former mayor.

The present mayor, James A. Fathers, is a nominee without resorting to the primary and the winner of today's contest will be pitted against him at the regular election July 23.

Richest Man In World Observes His Anniversary

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 8.—Seventy-four years old and the "richest man in the world"—worth upwards of half a billion dollars according to his business associates—John O. Rockefeller celebrated his birthday today. There was no elaborate program planned for the anniversary. The oil king spent the morning at Forest Hill. He received hundreds of messages of congratulations from business and personal friends.

Rockefeller's health is better today than it has been in years and Dr. H. F. Biggar his physician for many years, has assured him that he may count on many more birthdays. A game of golf, an automobile ride in the country and calls from relatives and friends made up the birthday program.

Despite many stories to the contrary, Rockefeller is unusually healthy for a man of his age, especially when his early business worries and work is taken into consideration. For his physical condition of today, Rockefeller gives credit to his personal physician and friend, Dr. H. F. Biggar, aged seventy-two. Rockefeller has kept his health and strength while men his junior by many years have succumbed after winning business laurels not nearly as great as those the oil king has won. Of these perhaps E. H. Harriman and the late J. P. Morgan are the most prominent. He has survived his one time partner, Henry M. Flagler, who recently died at the age of seventy-seven.

Dr. Biggar attributes the health of both his wealthy patient and himself to his always followed "system of living." This system he describes in a recently issued pamphlet which he has distributed among some of his friends. Its keynote is simplicity. Strict study of personal needs and constant watchfulness, also are among the essentials of longevity, according to the pamphlet.

Two meals a day, one entirely of uncooked fruit; an occasional day of fasting from all foods but fruit; epsom salt baths frequently and a few Turkish baths with vigorous massage at least every two weeks, are some of the recipes offered with the solid backing of their eminent success in the case of the doctor and his famous friend and patient.

ECONOMY TOUGH ON THE SENATORS

WASHINGTON, July 8.—It's pretty tough on our senators these hot days. They haven't anything to drink but common Potomac river water and the masseurs that used to help them cool off in the marble baths in the senate office building are gone away, looking for new jobs. The economy campaign is on in full force, and many a jaded senator, remembering the old days when all these little aids to comfort were his for the asking, adds another woeful shake to his head as he discusses the decadence of the age. During a recent hearing one senator stepped up to a water cooler of the water bottle kind. His face lighted up.

"Why I thought this was all gone," he said, as he poured himself three glasses of water, which he drank eagerly. "Fine," he said. "Fine. There never was a water as good as this and I've tried 'em all." A young page who had heard him seemed to be suffering from suppressed hysteria.

"What's the joke?" asked a bystander. "Well," laughed the page, "I was just trying to keep my face straight while the senator praised that water. It's in the old bottles, but I fill them regularly from the faucets out there and bring 'em in."

Which shows that even a United States senator is not infallible.

CITY MAY ENTER NORTHERN LEAGUE

Business Manager of St. Paul Club Sees Elliott About Transferring Games

MAY SELL THE FRANCHISE

H. P. Conrad May Also Retain Ownership of the Team; Need 400 Average

La Crosse has an opportunity of again breaking into professional baseball. C. T. Kelley, business manager of the St. Paul club of the Northern league is in La Crosse to confer with John Elliot, John Miller, Henry Rooney and other old club officers relative to a transfer of the St. Paul club's games to La Crosse.

According to Mr. Kelley, St. Paul is experiencing the same difficulty in drawing crowds that is Milwaukee in the Wisconsin-Illinois league. It is practically impossible, he says, to draw crowds for small league teams, despite the quality of baseball played, in a city supporting an association team.

Details of the proposition are lacking but the tentative program is said to contain two courses. One is to sell the franchise outright to La Crosse. The other is to merely transfer the home games of the team to La Crosse, Mr. H. P. Conrad, present owner of the team, retaining ownership.

According to Kelley an average attendance of 400 is necessary to support the club.

GUY THE PREMIER

LONDON, July 8.—Premier Asquith made the announcement in the house of commons yesterday that it is his intention to appoint a poet laureate to succeed the late Alfred Austin, whereupon an irreverent member, amid laughter, asked whether the prime minister had noticed that, whenever genius is patronized by authority, authority remains but genius flees. Another suggestion was that the office be enlarged so as to embrace a laureateship of literature. Mr. Asquith shook his head at this suggestion.

RESUME DYNAMITE IN RIVER SEARCH

Third Body Not Yet Found Since Friday Drowning; Hope to Hold Triple Funeral

More than fifty shots of dynamite were fired along the shore of Barron's island this afternoon by the searchers for the body of Miss Myrtle Ellers the only one of the three not yet recovered since drowning last Friday. A large number of boats were stationed nearby but up to 3:30 this afternoon the body had not been found.

Out of deference to the parents of the girl it has been decided to hold the bodies of the other two for another day, so that if possible the funeral services for the three who went to their death together may be held at the same time.

Every wing dam and slough between here and several miles below Brownsville have been carefully searched by friends of the parents and relatives without result and the dynamiting was resumed this afternoon in the belief that the body may have caught on a snag near where she went down.

STATE JEWELERS IN CONVENTION

MILWAUKEE, July 8.—President Keller replied to the address of welcome delivered by Mayor Bading when, at 1:30 this afternoon, the first formal session of the annual state jewelers' convention was called to order. The president's address was followed by the annual reports of the president, secretary and treasurer, the reports of standing committees and the appointment of convention committees.

MELLEN RESIGNS AS HEAD OF THE NEW HAVEN ROAD

BOSTON, July 8--At a meeting of the board of directors of the Boston & Maine railroad today Charles S. Mellen announced his retirement as president of the road. His resignation is to take effect on the appointment of a successor. The Boston & Maine is under the control of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, of which Mellen is also the head.

BODYGUARD IS WILSON'S CADDIE

HANOVER, N. H., July 8.—President Wilson motored 25 miles over the mountains to Hanover today to play golf. The course was deserted when he reached here, but was soon swarming with Dartmouth summer students, all eager to shake hands with him. After he had greeted each of them, secret service men asked them to leave. Scarcely had they gone when a serious difficulty developed. There was no caddy for the president. For a moment, disruption of the sport was threatened, but the president quickly solved the difficulty and impressed into service one of the secret service men, who laughingly shouldered the sticks.

It is probable the president will spend the remainder of the week here on advice of his physician, Dr. Carey Grayson.

DARROW RAPS MANUFACTURERS

The Great Labor Attorney Talks of Congress Investigation While in La Crosse

HE APPROVES THE LOCAL SYSTEM

Says Capital Frame-up Is Clear to Investigator; Labor Must Guard Own Interests

That a thorough investigation by congress of the inside workings of the National Association of Manufacturers will clearly prove that they and allied organizations have for years had for their object the attempt to secure favorable legislation, national and state, as well as to fight labor is the firm belief of Clarence Darrow, the noted labor lawyer who defended Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone in Idaho, several years ago, and the McNamara brothers in California recently. Mr. Darrow was in La Crosse a short time yesterday enroute to his home in Chicago after a northern trip.

"As to the charge that this association, through a publicity agent, attempted to bribe Samuel Gompers and that $40,000 was appropriated for the purpose, all I have to say is that a thorough investigation of this association will show many things that will open the eyes of the public," said Mr. Darrow. "Of course, Mr. Gompers could not be bribed and I do not know all the details of this particular matter, but I do know that organized capital certainly did try to put over a frame up on me and I know from my own experience that they would not hesitate to play the same tactics in any of their undertakings."

Appears in Good Health

Mr. Darrow seemed to have recovered his old time strength and vigor and besides appearing a trifle fatigued, showed no traces of his recent battles in Los Angeles.

"How about the present status of my case? Well, I am confident that no set of men will ever convict me of the charge of attempting to bribe the jury in the Los Angeles trials. For various reasons I cannot state just what I know of the plan of the prosecution at the present time, but I would not be surprised if the case is never tried again. Two juries failed to agree and a third trial, if held would certainly result in an acquittal."

When it was suggested that the people of the country were not willing to believe him guilty of such an offense, his face beamed with genuine gratification. "That is one of the greatest sources of satisfaction in this great fight between capital and labor," he said. "I am thoroughly glad to hear it. The frame-up capital tried to put over me out there was carefully worked out, but to one who investigates the case, knowing the people and the tremendous power back of the prosecution and the bitterness of the feeling, it is perfectly clear that it was a frame up pure and simple."

Approves Local System

Regarding the local labor situation, Mr. Darrow stated that he was glad to learn that the labor unions of La Crosse and western Wisconsin had for some years now been leaving the adjustment of their difficulties to one lawyer skilled in that line. "I know their attorney, Mr. Fred H. Hartwell, personally," he said, "and I know that with the other side of the proposition leaving their cases to men skilled in that line, the only way to successfully present our side of the proposition, whether it be in a lawsuit, strike or arbitration is to have someone who is likewise skilled in that line. The success of labor in your portion of the state shows the wisdom of this plan."

It is possible that Mr. Darrow may give a lecture in La Crosse before the end of the year.

LAMAR DEFENDS SELF ON GROUND OF PURE MOTIVE

Says His Object in Posing as Public Character Was to Force Reform in Wall Street

WANTED TO GET BEFORE PUBLIC

Says His Idea in Sending Lauterbach to Ledyard Was to Get Interests in Open

INJURY TO LEADERS ACCIDENT

Apologizes for "Temporarily Besmirching" Public Men and Declares His Good Intent

WASHINGTON, July 8.—In an elaborate defense of his action in pledging the democratic leaders of the house and the senate to the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., David Lamar, Wall street financier, declared to the senate lobby committee today that it was only the "usual Wall street game."

He insisted that he had been actuated by only "the highest public motives" and that his plan had been two-fold: To reinstate Edward Lauterbach as Morgan & Co.'s attorney and also to force a general reform in Wall street methods.

The "Wolf of Wall street" was not as domineering today as on his first appearance before the committee. The fact that he had been forced publicly to waive immunity from prosecution for his impersonations may have had some effect. In addition he was not permitted to make speeches. Time after time he was hotly rebuked by Chairman Overman, Senators Reed and Walsh, and finally he was sharply warned that he must stick to facts and not fancies, or else be removed from the room.

He Remedied Wrongs

"I am the only villain of Wall street, all others are pure!" fairly shouted Lamar, at one time. He insisted that for eight or nine years he had devoted most of his private fortune to remedying wrongs of "the street."

"I wanted to bring the Standard Oil, the American Tobacco company and the steel trust, and Messrs. Lovett, Evarts, Cravath, Ledyard and others into the open where the truth about them would be known," he declared. "I planned this impersonation and jeopardized my personal friend, Edward Lauterbach, to bring these people before a public forum.

"When I sent Lauterbach to Ledyard to tell him he represented the entire national government with the exception of President Wilson, and that it was willing to treat with Morgan & Co., I did it to bring this because I expected they would proceed against Lauterbach and myself for blackmail."

Lamar insisted that he had never planned to injure any public man.

"I wanted to produce an explosion," he said, "and I make no defense for what I did. It is with the deepest and most infinite regret that I now realize some public men were temporarily besmirched and I humbly apologize for it."

Senator Reed denounced Lamar for this declaration but the witness continued to expostulate that he had been fighting Wall street and the interests and never intended any reflection on any public man.

Criticism Stopped

David Lamar, known as the "Wolf of Wall street," was called to the stand by the lobby commission at his own request today to make a further explanation of his activity in impersonating public men. He held that his actions had always been with the most honorable intentions and started to criticise Senators Walsh and Reed, but was sharply reprimanded by Chairman Overman.

At the outset Lamar declared that he was well satisfied to leave his fate in the hands of Senators Overman, Nelson and Cummins. He then began:

"As far as Senators Reeds and Walsh are concerned,"——

"Hold on, sir," broke in Senator Overman, "we will have none of this. If you want to make any statement we will hear you, but we will not permit any indulgence in personality."

Lamar, subsiding, declared that he realized that his character was on trial before the country. He declared he had planned impersonation of Riordan and of Palmer to uncover a base conspiracy against his friend, Edward Lauterbach. He declared that as a result of his plan he had uncovered what he started for.

Wanted to Trap Ledyard

"It was a Wall street plan designed to bring Ledyard and his associates into the open," he said. "They have ruined many men before. I wanted to get them. It was a game of duplicity on their part as much as it was on mine. I wanted to give them a dead open and shut case so that they would come out into the open. I used Mr. Lauterbach. I wanted to give them prepared evi-

BASS FRY HATCH IS BEST IN YEARS

MADISON, Wis., July 8.—Supt. James Nevin of the state fisheries commission on Monday said the hatch of bassfry under natural conditions in Wisconsin this season had been unusually good and the indications were that lakes and streams would afford better bass fishing in three or four years than they have for some years.

Supt. Nevin said some fear was felt during the cool weather in early June, when the temperature of the water dropped more than 12 degrees, that the bass eggs would be killed, but they were not, and the hot weather that followed caused a much larger percentage of eggs to hatch than was usual.

THE TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

CURING A CASE

By JOHN PHILIP ORTH
Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

There was no room to doubt that Paul Kenison was a conceited young man. He was twenty-three years old and had money. He was told almost every day that he was a distinguished looking young man. Mothers of marriageable daughters cultivated him, and the daughters themselves simpered at his approach. The society papers hinted that a widowed French countess had followed him over half of Europe, and that the widow of a German baron had determined upon suicide if he would not give her his heart.

There were many other things to make Mr. Kenison believe that he was the salt of the earth, or at least a good share of it, and he wasn't so much to blame for his chestiness. You cannot find a case in either sacred or profane history, nor yet in the encyclopedia nor the family almanac, where a conceited young man arrived at the point where he arose some fine morning and said to himself:

"Look here, my friend, you are making a fool of yourself! Cut it out!"

On a certain spring morning young Mr. Kenison took a walk. It wasn't out in the country under leafy bowers, where the birds sing and the tree toads warble, but on the hard stone sidewalk of the avenue. The walk wasn't for his health, but to smoke a cigar and show his face and figure and the three different creases he had pressed into the legs of his trousers the evening before. One is the usual number for common folks, two begins to hit high society, and three leads the procession! Mr. Kenison had started out to lead.

While the young man was being admired and favorably discussed by shop girls and stenographers who were an hour late in getting into the city from their suburban homes, an auto which he had just passed him exploded a tire and came to a stop with a bump. There was a young lady in the tonneau and she gave a yell—just one yell. That was enough for Mr. Kenison, however. He bounded forward, cheered by three white wings who are not in the bounding business, and was within five feet of the auto when the young lady descended with grace and dignity and took the sidewalk and sauntered away. She had not even bestowed a look on the gallant young man!

"By George!" he gasped as the white wings sniggered.

Then, recovering a little from the blow he approached the chauffeur and asked, "Was she hurt at all?"

"Did you see her limping as she sallied away?"

"No, I didn't notice any limp."

"Then you needn't worry yourself in a decline over it."

Mr. Kenison hadn't left his purse under his pillow when he arose. Some heroes are always doing that, and they have to pass dozens of saloons without a look-in in consequence. His purse was right at hand, and he opened it and selected a bill which might have stood for a thousand dollars, but probably didn't, and handing it to the chauffeur he asked: "Who is the girl?"

"Picked her up at a drug store on Lexington avenue. She telephoned!"

"What drug store?"

"Smith's just above Forty-eighth."

Mr. Kenison walked around the corner and took a cab for Smith's. He wasn't a masher, but his feelings had been hurt by the way he had been ignored. It was a clear case of cold rebuff.

"There was a young lady took an auto from here about half an hour ago," said Mr. Kenison to the clark in the drugistore.

"Well, it wasn't yours," was the fresh reply.

"Do you know who she is?"

"Look in the directory for Smith."

Mr. Kenison turned and walked out, and he was followed by a boy who had been taking half an hour to get away with a soda ice cream.

"Say, mister, I can tell you about that girl," he said.

"How do you happen to know?" was asked.

"'Cause she's been visiting my sister Kate, and has just gone home. I came here with her to telephone, and she bought me a soda."

"And who is she?"

"Her name is fifty cents, pay in advance."

A half dollar changed hands.

"Her name is Irma Winters, and she lives in the country and her folks are rich."

"Whereabouts in the country?"

"You know where Rosedale is?"

"Yes."

"Well, it's two miles beyond that. Great big house and a stone dog each side of the gate. You can't miss it. If you do, go along till you see a black calf in a pasture and then turn back. You can drive out there in your auto in an hour. There you are and that's all."

All conceited young men are not determined and desperate fellows. Mr. Kenison wasn't aware that he was until this episode occurred. Was he in love? He couldn't say. Had his fund of romance been appealed to?

Mr. Kenison might have been seen approaching the Winters' manor house next day about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and Miss Irma Winters might have been seen seated on the veranda thereof.

Mr. Kenison saw her and she saw him.

Of a sudden Mr. Kenison threw up his hands and lurched over. Of a sudden the auto stopped. Of a sudden Miss Irma arose. Of a sudden the chauffeur called to her that the gentleman had fainted away. She walked down to the stone dogs, took a long look at the man who had fainted, and there was a smile lurking in the corners of her mouth as she queried of the driver:

"Do you think it is his heart or his cheek!"

"I—I can't say, ma'am."

"Does he have them often?"

"I guess he does, for when leaving the city he told me if he had one of his spells I was to get him into the nearest house and telephone for a doctor."

"I see. He should carry his hospital with him when he travels. There's a creek just below the hill. When you reach it you'd better lay him at full length in the water for a time."

"I hope he won't die on my hands."

"Oh, there isn't the slightest danger of that!"

When the auto had proceeded for half a mile Mr. Kenison sat up. The chauffeur was ready for him with: "I don't know what your game is, old man, but you didn't fool that girl for a red cent."

"I think I detected a touch of sympathy in her voice."

"Then you've got another think coming. She was half grinning all the time! She acted as if she had seen you before."

Ignored again, and this time there was a cruel heartlessness in it.

Three days later, at an early forenoon hour, he rode a horse out of the village and to within half a mile of the Winters manor. Then he dismounted, loosened the saddle, took off the bridle and sent the horse onward with a slap. When Miss Irma came driving past on her way to the village postoffice she found a man lying beside the road. She got down and took a look at him, and then drove off, saying in a voice that could be heard by the dead man:

"It's the same one that had the brainstorm the other day. Poor young man! How did it happen that his guardian ever let him mount a horse!"

But desperation has its reward as well as integrity. A few days later Mr. Kenison had the luck to meet Miss Irma on the highway just after a wheel of her phaeton had been smashed by collision with a rock. He advanced, hat in hand, but she waved him back and said:

"You'll be late at the hospital if you stop!"

"The hospital?"

"Yes. Aren't you taking daily treatment?"

"For what?"

"For your stupendous conceit."

It was months later before he could get a formal introduction to her, and though he lost no time in pleading his love a full year passed before she would yield.

When a man can travel as far on his nerve as others can on an excursion ticket, the railroads are sure to lose money.

Considerable rivalry has developed between St. Paul, Atlantic City and Asbury Park, all of which are seeking the 1914 meeting. St. Paul and Atlantic City are regarded as the most likely points.

The Boys Were Soon Quarreling.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Story of The Great Grasshopper War.

THE crickets were chirping outside in the grass. Evelyn turned to the window. "Grasshopper Green can't go to sleep tonight, can he?" she said to daddy.

"That isn't Grasshopper Green," Jack retorted. "That is a cricket."

"Come," interrupted daddy; "we don't want to have another grasshopper war here. The cricket is a cousin of the grasshopper, and their voices do sound something alike."

"What was the grasshopper war?" Jack asked. "Did the grasshoppers kill one another?"

"Well," daddy went on, "there was only one grasshopper in this war. Suppose I tell you about it.

"Long ago, when the pilgrim fathers came from England and settled at Plymouth, Mass., the country was a wild place.

"Each Indian tribe had its country and was very particular that another tribe should not hunt and fish on its land. Many Indian wars were fought on this account.

"And this was the way this war started: One summer day an Indian woman of one of the tribes that lived in Massachusetts started out with her little boy to visit an Indian woman friend in another tribe. As she stalked through the woods, with her little boy at her side, the chirp of a grasshopper was heard. The boy caught sight of the insect and, starting off after it, soon had it in his hand.

"The boy carried the grasshopper with him to the Indian village which they were going to visit. While his mother was talking to her friend he played with the friend's little boy. Soon he was showing the grasshopper which he had caught. The other little boy at once wanted it. The visiting boy refused to give it to him, and a quarrel started.

"The mothers came to the door. Each mother took her own boy's part, and soon they were quarreling. Then other Indians came up, and, of course, they took the part of the woman and boy of their own tribe.

"Grasping the hand of her boy, the visitor started home in great anger. She told her husband and friends how she had been treated. The chiefs of the tribes took up the quarrel about the grasshopper, and then there was war.

"Men were soon killing one another and homes were being burned all because two foolish little boys had quarreled about a grasshopper. And the pilgrim fathers, who were no doubt glad that the Indians (of whom they were afraid), killed one another, said that before the war was over nearly every one in the two tribes at war was dead."

Now the knockers are trying to prove that Poe did not write "The Raven," but nobody has thus far had the hardihood to claim that Bacon wrote it. Bacon wrote nothing but Shakespeare plays.

THEIR OBLIGATION TO THE PUBLIC

Law firms that prosecute and defend suits from a sense of public duty and not for the fees involved are rare enough in this country to make the example set by the firm of Bowers & Sands of New York worthy of notice. After the suit brought by Col. Roosevelt against Editor Newett of Marquette was ended he wrote and asked for his bill. He was told by William H. Van Benschoten, the firm member who went from New York to Marquette to handle the case, that there was no bill, the firm regarding its labors as part of its obligations to the public.

What at first will seem strange to the reader is the fact that this same firm gratuitously defended the New York World when it was sued for libel by the colonel while he was president. Yet it was eminently consistent. Roosevelt was wrong in the World libel suit. The United States as a government was not libeled and it would be dangerous to admit for a moment that a government could collect damages for charges made against its instruments. If there was any libel in connection with the Panama canal charges the remedy rested with the individuals upon whom these accusations reflected. In the Newett case Roosevelt was right. The principle at stake was the right of public men to run for office and be protected from the slander that so often has followed those who venture to play a prominent part in public life. What seems a paradox in the conduct of the firm thus becomes simple.

A still more conspicuous example of the public spirited lawyer is found in Louis D. Brandeis, of Boston, whose unremunerated services in cases of wide public importance have caused him to be known as "the people's attorney."

It would be good for this country if we had more firms like these we have mentioned. Eminent lawyers who are financially prosperous could well afford to set an example in public spirit to the rest of the profession by appearing in cases in which fundamental principles important to all of us are involved.

WHY IS A CANVASSER?

"A stranger on your doorstep is there strictly on business. Unless his appearance or manner is offensive invite him in. He will state the nature of his call."

Thus does a prominent newspaper defend door to door solicitation.

No housewife who has had experience will doubt that "he will state the nature of his call." He will begin at 8 a. m.—when the breakfast dishes are waiting to be washed—to state it and unless interrupted by irrelevant remarks will be stating it at 11, when dinner is due to be started. He will state it in the most eloquent of language, with a generous wealth of detail. He will show you in fifty-seven different ways that the article for which you have been waiting so long is now being offered to you at an absurd sacrifice, due to the fact that the company has over-produced and must sell at a sensational discount to make room for other stock. Or, perhaps, the particular vacuum cleaner or egg beater or rug or rare lace which he is demonstrating is being sold at an introductory price to a few leading and representative citizens in the community merely that the masses may see and appreciate its superlative merits. If it is a set of books which the affable chap is selling he will convince you—if you let him stay long enough—that such information as you have picked up in school or in life are but crumbs that fell from the table of knowledge by accident. To complete your education you need Skidpath's History of the World in twenty-six sumptuous volumes, deckled edges, three-quarter morocco, $2 down and payments until death do us part.

Yes, there are two sides to the canvassing problem, the canvasser's side and the housewife's side. From the canvasser's point of view women are divided into three classes, those who just listen, those who listen and buy and those who do neither. The first are blessed, the second are thrice blessed and the third are grouches. The busy women, however, called to the door twenty or so times a day, has learned that to protect herself she has to be a grouch. To the woman who knows what she wants to buy and where to buy it there is but one big question—"Why is a canvasser?"

CLARITY A FORCE IN SALESMANSHIP

From President Wilson's clearness of talk, a suggestion of salesmanship may be obtained. The president reveals himself as clear in his own mind because he has studied the questions with which he has to deal and is the master of his material. "There is a lesson for the seller of goods in this," said the New York Mail recently. "It is the salesman who knows the commodity who makes the sales. Can a man talk about nothing? If one knows next to nothing of his product, his talk in selling is powerless to convince. Indeed, in all our intercourse with one another, clarity of statement greases the wheels. Most of our defeats are traceable back to the confession, 'I did not make myself understood.' But back of that is another humiliating self-consciousness: 'I did not know my own story; I fail to understand the thing myself.'"

There is not only a lesson for salesmanship in this, but also for the advertiser. The convincing advertiser who gets results knows three things and three things thoroughly: He knows his goods, he knows his public and he knows how to make his public want his goods.

Goods and public can only be learned by study and experience. To make the public want a certain kind of goods is an art.

The most successful advertisement is worded so as to appeal to the average man. It must capture his attention, awaken desire and convince the judgment. All these things are more effectively done by the enthusiasm of the ad writer rather than by cold puzzling over forms of phrase or particular kinds of words.

There is a great deal of personality in advertising. The good ad writer writes a magnetic ad because he is sincere and is able to convince others because he has first convinced himself.

There is much force in the clearness which characterizes the president. It can be obtained by the same methods used by that high official, towit, by conscientiously taking the utmost possible pains.

Just when everything is going along smoothly a French scientist discovers that a couple of sun spots are missing. Now we are all wrought up over that matter.

Quips and Cranks and Wanton Wiles

The High Brow Magazine

The price of it is thirty-five,
That is too much? Why, man alive
You don't appreciate high art
Shown in the advertising part.
Nine-tenths of it is of this class,
Just one conglomerated mass
Of auto cars and patent soap
And phonographs and other dope.
Of course, there's readin' to it, too,
And when you come to glance it through
You'll find an article or so,
Upon the nicest way to grow
Alfalfa in the arid west
Or how to save your coin the best.
Of course a lot of that is bluff,
And you don't have to read the stuff.
And it's a dollar to a cent
You wouldn't know just what it meant.
But you're rewarded if you wait;
The ads are always simply great.

Moral Worked Both Ways

A little boy of four years of age, on noticing for the first time a lock of gray hair on his father's head, asked:

"Papa, why are some of your hairs gray?"

Thinking to drive home a moral lesson, the father answered:

"Papa has a new gray hair every time his little boy is naughty."

The child seemed lost in thought but, after a pause, said gravely:

"Then grandpa must have had awfully naughty boys."

Did You Ever Catch a Snig?

In the lake district of New Jersey a boy has been discovered who, it is predicted, will develop into one of the world's greatest anglers. He was found by a visitor from New York fishing stolidly with an improvised rod and hook.

He paid no attention when spoken to, but mournfully pursued the matter in hand.

"What are you doin?" he was asked.

"Fishin' for snigs," he replied, in a lifeless voice.

"What are snigs?" said the curious spectator.

"I don't know," he replied, drearily, "I've never caught one yet."

Gastric Disturbance

It was story telling time in the first grade. The teacher had taken her place in front of the class and asked: "What would you like to hear today?" A little hand shot up in the back of the room. "Well, Bobby, what story you want?" "Please ma'am, tell about the little boy who swallowed the piece of ribbon and it made him sick at his stomach."

The teacher looked mystified. "Bobby, I never heard of that story. We had better take something else." But Bobby was not so easily downed.

"Oh, yes, you have teacher. You know it says:

"'He ran to the window as quick as a flash.

"'Flung open the shutters and threw up the sash.'"—National Food Magazine.

When It Began

A friend of the family had been summoned to testify, much against his will, as to domestic disturbances in a certain household.

"You saw those blows administered?" asked counsel.

"Yes, sir," replied the witness.

"Did you witness the beginning of the quarrel between Mr. and Mrs. Dash?"

"I did."

"When was it?"

"Six years ago."

"Six years ago! How is that possible?"

"I was a guest at their wedding," said the witness.

A Sound Alibi

"And you say that you are innocent of the charge of stealing a rooster from Mr. Jones?" asked an Arkansas judge of a meek looking prisoner.

"Yes, sir; and I can prove it."

"How can you prove it?"

"I can prove that I didn't steal Mr. Jones' rooster, judge, because I stole two hens from Mr. Graston the same night, and Jones lives five miles from Graston's."

"The proof is conclusive," said the judge. "Discharge the prisoner."—National Food Magazine.

PEERESS HYPNOTIZED BRITISH MILLIONAIRE

Lady Sackville, according to the sisters of Sir John Murray Scott, the British millionaire, had him hypnotized. He died some time ago and now his relatives have brought a will case in the courts.

A curious account of Lady Sackville's relations with Sir John was given by witnesses. Alicia Scott, Sir John's elder sister, asserted that Lady Sackville exercised over him a "kind of spell" and a "mesmeric" power. He was "subservient" to her and "afraid of her temper." He "seemed exactly like a slave." He was, Miss Scott said, "a weak man, easily influenced."

IN The WORLD OF WOMEN

Under Washington's (D. C.) new excise law women patrons of restaurants and cafes may be served with drinks only when they order meals with their drinks. The question, in consequence, is what constitutes a meal. Many are interpreting it to mean a sandwich.

Style With a Purpose

"Don't you think, dear," began Comfy, "that our next door neighbors, the Scrubbs, are putting on a great deal too much style, considering the fact that they never know from day to day where the next meal is coming from?"

"Well," replied Mrs. Comfy, "you see, the more style they put on the more likely they are to be invited out to dinner."

Now Constance had risen; and Betsy-Barbara, in a state of suppressed fury, stood beside her, flashing sparks from her golden hair and her blue eyes and little white teeth. Inspector McGee stepped to the door to summon a stenographer. And Rosalie, quick as thought, slipped up beside Constance.

"Not a word more than you can help about this proposing to you—not a word!" she whispered.

"Step into this room, ladies," said McGee. "I'll join you in a moment. We won't need you, Mrs. Le Grange."

Alone with the Inspector, Rosalie Le Grange stood regarding him from top to toe. He faced her in a little embarrassment, which he covered with bluff.

"Well, you carried your pretend off nicely," he said; "anybody'd have thought you were sore on me."

For answer, Rosalie drew up a corner of her fine, firm, upper lip. "Sometimes," she said, "I hate a cop."

Martin McGee laughed uneasily. "Well, we got the goods," he said; "motive's established, all right."

"You got the goods, not we," replied Rosalie; "don't you count me in on that game. Third Degree! On the likes of her!"

But Inspector McGee, more interested just then in his professional problem than in what any woman thought of him, was pursuing his own train of reflection.

"In love with Hanska's wife—and Hanska'd mistreated her—and she wanted a divorce and couldn't get it. Wade and Hanska had quarreled. Wade goes up there with his curio shop and lays it down on the table. They quarrel again. Wade is a fencer. He picks up that knife and lets him have it just by instinct. Then he walks out of the door and gets rattled and beats it. Of course, it would be hard to establish first-degree murder on what we've got now—but we'll get it."

"You think so, do you?" replied Rosalie. "My, don't promotion make a smart man of a pavement-pounding cop!"

"Guess you don't know," replied McGee, "what this man Wade said when we pinched him in Boston and told him what it was for?"

"No."

"He said: 'I didn't kill him, but by God I'd like to shake hands with the man who did!'" In the Inspector's voice there was an air of finality and triumph.

"Did he say that?" asked Rosalie; "did he say that?" She mused for a moment, revolving many principles of human conduct drawn from her large experience.

"Martin McGee," she said at length, "I told you a while ago I wasn't going to monkey with this thing. But I'm an old fool—and I'm in it—my own way, as I always worked."

McGee laughed.

"I thought you couldn't keep out of it," he said, "but you'll run against Lawrence Wade at the end."

As the two strange women came through the door, they found Rosalie Le Grange waiting. Constance looked her full in the eye; and suddenly her hands went up to her own face and she surrendered herself to her misery. And oddly enough, she turned in her distress not to her friend and companion Betsy-Barbara but to this strange woman. As a bruised child runs to its mother, she ran to Rosalie Le Grange and bowed a weary head upon her shoulder. Rosalie took her to the bosom on which—in her own queer way—she had borne the burdens of thousands for thirty years long.

"You poor lamb!" she exclaimed; "you poor lamb! Now it's going to be all right, dearie—and you're comin' home with me!"

"And that!" said Rosalie Le Grange as she retold this tale to the only person who ever enjoyed her full confidence, "was the queerest way that ever I saw of solicitin' custom for a boarding-house."

CHAPTER IV.
A Man Who Laughs.

"What will become of me?" wailed Mrs. Moore to Rosalie Le Grange. And Rosalie forebore at first to answer, for the ultimate destiny of Mrs. Moore appeared, indeed, black and uncertain.

Not that undulation and gnashing of teeth meant anything in her case. Weeping, for her, was the oil on the wheels of life. She wept when the butcher failed to bring the lamb chops, when she was moved by song, when she compared the luxuries of Madame Le Grange's house to the bare necessities of her own. Still, in this instance, she had cause for grief. The police, having ransacked, measured and photographed the Moore boardinghouse to the limit of their imagination, announced after four days that Mrs. Moore could bring her establishment back. But when Mrs. Moore notified the boarders, she met—the expected. Miss Harding, for example, declared that she was going to let well enough alone. After what had happened she could never sleep in that place again. When Mrs. Moore melted to tears, Miss Harding grew peppery. If Mrs. Moore wanted to know, it was towels, more than anything else, which kept her at Mrs. Le Grange's. She had boarded in ten separate and distinct places in New York, and never before did she see a place where you couldn't use the towels for a pocket handkerchief. Miss Jones, her echo in everything, indorsed her sentiments, adding that Mrs. La Grange's coffee was coffee.

Professor Noll was more courteous, but just as firm. He had already indicated his intentions by getting permission from the police to move his collection. When Mrs. Moore interviewed him, he was tacking on the wall a six-foot Japanese kakemono. He was sorry, but the greater variety of menu at Mrs. Le Grange's helped him to practice the principles of scientific alimentation. If Mrs. Moore would listen to his former advice and reorganize her catering on the scientific plan, he could guarantee her a houseful of his disciples. Otherwise, he preferred to stay where he was. Mr. North, just out of jail, had not put in an appearance. Mrs. Moore did not even attempt to see Miss Estrilla. That lady was worse, a great deal worse. Besides the old trouble with her optic nerve, she had a kind of nervous prostration due to the shock. There had been talk of a trained nurse; but Rosalie Le Grange waved that proposal aside. She herself carried up the invalid's meals, attended to bandages and medicines, kept order in her room. Mrs. Moore had no offering to counterbalance that.

To Help Nature Shed a Bad Complexion

(From The Family Physician)

Beauty devotees are enthusiastic over the beautifying qualities of mercolized wax. Perhaps nothing discovered within recent years accomplishes so much, so quickly, without harm, without detaining one indoors, and at such small expense. The principal reason for its wonderful merit is that it works in harmony with physiological laws. Instead of hiding, or "curing" complexion defects, it removes them. The wax actually takes off the aged, faded, sallow, freckled or blotchy cuticle, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience. It is Nature's way of renewing complexions. When the natural process is retarded because of deficient circulation or nerve tone, mercolized wax comes to the rescue and hastens the skin shedding. The new complexion which appears is a natural one, youthful, healthy, exquisitely beautiful. If you've never tried mercolized wax, get an ounce of it at the drug store, use at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning.

Another natural beautifying treatment—for wrinkled skin—is to bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This is remarkably and instantaneously effective.—Advertisement.

RE-ELECT BENEZET TO HEAD SCHOOLS

Superintendent Named for Fourth Time to Take Charge of Schools of the City

INSTALL PLANT AT HIGH SCHOOL

Board Votes to Put in Power, Heat and Lighting Plant as Measure of Economy

School Superintendent L. P. Benezet was last night elected, for the fourth successive time, to take charge of the school system of La Crosse, at the annual meeting of the school board last night. John Beranek, clerk of the board, was also re-elected.

Despite the protests of Thurston Owens, manager of the gas company, and his chief engineer, S. W. Cheney, the board of education authorized the purchase of a heating and electric plant for the new high school, which will in the future make its own heat, light and power. The gas and electric company officials could not show the board to its satisfaction that they could buy cheaper service. Local engineers advised the board that a $5,000 plant would pay for itself in three years in the saving accomplished, and the board accordingly decided to go ahead. The new plant will be in operation in the fall.

Hirshheimer on Board

With one exception, the personnel of the industrial school board remains the same. L. F. Easton has resigned, and L. C. Hirshheimer was elected to fill his place for a two year term. Adolph Schroeder was elected for a two year term, and J. B. Funke and John Rusche were re-elected for periods of one year each.

The annual report of Superintendent Benezet was read at the meeting. The most distinctive feature of the report was the statement that school enrollment in the city in the past year has eclipsed all records for growth since 1896. The enrollment was 210 more than the previous year. Last year's enrollment was an increase of 146 over the year before.

Three New Teachers

Three new teachers were elected for the coming year. Miss Lillian Waters, who was married recently to Joseph Fowler, will be succeeded as teacher of the second grade in the Jefferson school by Miss Mary Reilly. C. D. Brower will teach manual training in the new Hixon addition to the high school. Miss Ada Jagow will take charge of the fifth grade work on the north side.

The board received the report of a committee to the effect that Principal H. G. Hayden of the north side was engaged in taking the school census. An order was authorized to purchase 120 new desks for the high school to take care of the increase which is expected to reach that figure in the fall. The board authorized the payment of $400 to the park commission in return for land turned over to the school board by the commission.

A committee was appointed to go into the subject of playground apparatus, with a view to equipping the grounds of the graded schools in the city. It was also decided to spend some of the appropriation in beautifying the school grounds.

THE THREE LEADING BASE RUNNERS

The American league players still hold the base stealing leadership of the present season. Milan the great outfielder of the Washington club has performed the remarkable feat of stealing forty-one bases in seventy games, a record which has never before been equalled in the big leagues. He is far ahead of the next best and Ty Cobb, once the champion base stealer, does not show in this class.

Milan is followed by Eddie Collins, the lightning second baseman of Philadelphia, with twenty-seven stolen bases in sixty-six games, and Moeller, the Washington outfielder, with twenty-seven in seventy games. Thus Clark Griffith, manager of the Senators, has other evidence than merely Walter Johnson that he has a great baseball club.

OLYMPIC JUMPERS TO WED TOGETHER

NEWARK, N. J., July 8.—Platt and Ben Adams, famous jumpers and members of the American Olympic team at Stockholm, will appear together in a different sort of event this fall when Ben will marry Miss Marjorie Porter of Newark and Platt will wed Julie Lombard Hubbard of Houghton, Mich.

The Adams boys have always appeared together in athletic meets in which they have entered and usually took first and second in events, but in the matrimonial meet scheduled, the family will make a clean sweep, as Rule, another brother, is to be married at the same time. Rule is to marry Miss Mabel B. Sauer of Newark.

The marriage of Platt and Miss Hubbard, who is the daughter of Dr. Lucius L. Hubbard, might be called the culmination of an Olympic romance. They first met on the ship on which the Adams boys returned from the Olympic games.

ENGINEER STUNNED BY BLOW ON HEAD

Despite the fact that through the aid of the "Safety First" committee of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad many accidents have been averted by watching all loose boards on freight cars, Engineer E. Woodward, running in through the yards at the throttle of eastbound passenger train No. 18 at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon was struck on the temple by a board that was protruding from the side of a box car standing on a track near the main line.

Woodward's fireman had just thrown in a scoop of coal and was climbing in his seat to make the coast to the depot when he heard the sharp contact of the board against Woodward's forehead. He was stunned only for a moment. Dr. R. E. Flynn was at the station when No. 18 arrived and temporarily dressed the wound.

Dr. Flynn later took Woodward to a hospital in an automobile. No serious effects will result. Woodward is from Minneapolis.

LABOR DEMAND IS FALLING OFF

MADISON, Wis., July 8.—The labor market in Wisconsin, as viewed from the state free employment offices in Milwaukee, Superior, La Crosse and Oshkosh, showed a decreasing demand and an increasing supply during the month just closed. Labor demand which had been greater than the supply for several months fell during the month close to the amount of the supply. In some industries, notably metals and machinery and boot and shoe making, work was distinctly slack. Clerical and male hotel and restaurant help was also in excess of the demand.

Common laborers are still greatly in demand, but the foundries which were short of men for several months are gradually filling up, and employers of street and building laborers are having less difficulty in getting help.

Irving F. Nix, of the Lawrence school of expression, will give an entertainment in the Methodist church at Onalaska tonight. Mr. Nix is said to be one of the best platform entertainers in this part of the country. He is a personal friend of Ralph Connor, author, who recommends his readings. He will give three readings in the Scotch dialect, among which will be the popular one "Cuddle doon." The entertainment is being given under the auspices of the Epworth league of the church.

SLEUTH ON TRAIL WITH CAN OF BAIT

W. H. Fitzsimmons, city detective, accompanied by his 12 year old son George, laid aside all thought of criminalities and left the city in jeopardy today to seek a day's rest on the cool banks of Black river. It was rumored that "Fitz" took several fish poles along, and when he got down near the river he was seen to obtain a wooden bucket, which looked as if it might contain fish bait. Results will tell whether Mr. Fitzsimmons is as good at detecting the little finny fellows as the two-legged ones.

MAKES RECORD RUN ON THE MILWAUKEE

A record for the ninety-three miles between Portage and Milwaukee was established yesterday afternoon by Engineer Ed. Bloomfield, of the Milwaukee road, when he made the distance in ninety-two minutes, with four stops.

Bloomfield was pulling a train of four cars. It was a special carrying Frank P. Hapwood, Minneapolis, who is enroute to New York, it is said, in pursuit of his son-in-law, Charles G. Gates. Hapwood and Gates had a fight in a Minneapolis cafe, where Gates was said to be squandering some of the thirty millions left him by his father, the late John W. Gates. Gates left immediately on a special train for New York.

The fireman on the record-breaking run was Charles McMahon, and the conductor of the special William Schaefer, La Crosse.

DAUGHTER OF PRESIDENT TO WED MAN WHO LOOKS VERY MUCH LIKE HER DADDY

Jessie Wilson has picked out a young lawyer for a husband, a young man now employed in the office of the district attorney of New York county, who looks so much like her father that the chief difference in their appearance is found in their ages. Francis Bowes Sayre is the son of a railroad builder. He hails from Pennsylvania, but some time ago made up his mind that he would like to study law. He entered the office of the district attorney as a clerk while he studied. He has not yet been admitted to the bar, but is almost ready for his final examination. OUT-JOSEPHINING JOSEPHINE IN FASHIONS SENT TO THE UNITED STATES FROM PARIS

This new Paris model is declared by fashion experts to be the latest invention of some of the great men milliners of the world's center of fashion. The gown is copied from that of Josephine. It shows the revival of the directoire influence among French dressmakers. The feature of the gown is the seven-foot train which winds around the feet or is carried over the shoulder during the dance. The classic, simple lines which outline the figure are purely directoire.

U. S. ARMY AIRMAN KILLED IN FLIGHT

Lieutenant Loren H. Call Dies When His Plane Collapses at Start of Flight

HOUSTON, Tex., July 8.—Lieutenant Loren H. Call, of the United States army aviation corps, was killed today when his aeroplane collapsed just after the start of a flight. The accident occurred at the army aviation field near here.

Lieutenant Call, though attached to the army aviation corps for only a comparatively short time, was one of the most successful of the army aviators and only yesterday made a mile a minute flight of twenty miles.

He was born in Missouri June 30, 1888, and appointed a second lieutenant in the coast artillery from Kansas City in 1909. Lieutenant Call is the tenth army aviator to meet death.

Call fell with his aeroplane from a height variously estimated by spectators from 500 to 1,000 feet and was instantly killed. Hanging with his hands with a forward rail of the biplane as it dropped vertically, nose down, Lieutenant Call released his grip at a height of about 100 feet and plunged straight down.

Major General Carter appointed Major Andrew Brester, inspector general of the southern department, and Lieutenants Gregg and Kirtling of the First aero squadron, a board of investigation to determine if possible the cause of the accident and report.

The biplane was a total wreck.

MAYFLOWER SHELLED?

REPORTED THAT PRESIDENT'S YACHT WAS NEARLY HIT BY PIECE OF SHELL FROM NAVAL PROVING GROUND

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Navy department officials said today that no report had been made to them of any near-accident to the presidential yacht Mayflower, whereby a piece of shell fired at the proving grounds at Indian Head, struck the water near the vessel during the president's recent trip down the Potomac. That an investigation would be made of the matter was understood here. Commander McCully, of the Mayflower, insisted today he knew nothing of the reported accident.

The story was that while the presidenth was steaming past the proving grounds a piece of shell which had twisted off a projectile fell in the water about 300 feet astern.

It is charged that Newton offered a certain sum of money if condemned paving blocks were allowed to pass inspection. Stratton, it is alleger, pretended to agree to the plan, then reported it to his superiors. Detectives were put on the case and the arrest was made after Newton is alleged to have passed money to Stratton in their presence.

ATTACK DIVORCE AGAIN

CHICAGO, July 8.—Three circuit court judges, sitting en banc today heard another chapter in the second attempt to annul the divorce granted Mrs. Grace Brown-Guggenheim-Wahl from William Guggenheim, one of the smelter millionaires, in Chicago in March, 1901. The first attempt to have the decree annulled was made by the divorced wife herself, but was refused by Judge Heard, who ruled that such a decision would be against public policy, Guggenheim having remarried. The effect of an annullment would be to make the second marriage bigamous. The second attempt is being made by State's Attorney Hoyne. Assistant State's Attorney Raber, in his opening statement to the court, declared that the decree was a fraud on the court and that it was obtained by manufactured evidence.

SHOT BY WOMAN MAN IS DYING

ST. LOUIS, July 8.—James E. Crispin of Richmond, Mo., of a prominent family, is in a dying condition at the University hospital here from a revolver wound in the abdomen, received the night of July 4.

Mrs. Ora Stafford, keeper of a resort at Richmond, is being held, charged with firing the shot. The shooting occurred near midnight, and relatives at once obtained a motor car and the wounded man was rushed fifty miles to Kansas City, where he was placed under medical care. Blood poisoning is feared.

A. M. Clark, prosecuting attorney of Ray county, came here yesterday and obtained a signed statement from Crispin. In the statement Crispin said he had visited Mrs. Stafford's house earlier in the day and had been drinking. Returning alone at night, he was refused admission. The screen door at the rear of the house was locked, and when he tried to open it, he says, the woman shot through the screen.

ENGLAND FINISHES REFORM OF CONGO

Have Forced Belgian Government to End Abuses in the Rubber Districts

YOUNG PRINCE IS A JOKER

Prince Henry on Visit Responds to Sister's Plea for Gift in Unique Way

BY ED L. KEEN
(London Correspondent of the United Press.)

LONDON, July 8.—With the dissolution of the Congo Reform association, which was formally notified to the Belgian government today, the closing chapter was written in one of the most successful international crusades ever undertaken in England. It was admittedly due almost altogether to the efforts of this organization of British publicists that the atrocities of the Congo, which so shocked the entire world when they were first revealed a dozen years ago during the reign of the late King Leopold, have now entirely disappeared. The removal of the rubber tax, or "blood tax," toward which the association especially directed its energies, now leaves the native of the Congo free to gather the natural products of his country and dispose of them in legitimate trade, without restriction.

"The Congo has ceased to be drained of its life blood in the interests of Belgian capitalists, who were aided and abetted by American financiers," today said E. D. Morel, secretary of the association, following the final meeting of the organization, "and as our objects have been accomplished, there is no further need of our existence.

"The concessionaire companies, of shameful memory, have all either been annulled or their powers curtailed and transformed, and thousands of natives who had fled to recesses of the forest to escape their tormentors are now back in their old settlements on the river banks. The country is no longer harried by swarms of irregular soldiers, and the practice by the administration of arming one tribe against another has been abolished. Our association has seen all its demands save one realized. We failed to secure special legislative enactment recognizing native tenure of land, but the Belgian government is acting upon that policy without formally incorporating it into law.

"It may take two or more generations to heal the wounds inflicted upon the Conge, but we are satisfied that a return to the old system has now been made utterly impossible. The success of our agitation really marks an epoch in the history of the relations of European nations toward the colored races."

Little Prince Henry, aged 13, is the practical joker of the British Royal family. Here is his latest. His sister, Princess Mary, wrote him the other day while he was visiting in Cornwall, asking him to send her some flowers which, according to the newspapers, were blooming in profusion in the "English Riviera." "You know how fond I am of early spring flowers," she wrote. Next day there arrived at Buckingham palace a beautiful basket addressed to Princess Mary. The writing was that of Prince Henry. When the princess opened the basket she found tastefully tied up with heliotrope ribbon a huge bunch of—cauliflower.

Entire prohibition of the use of aeroplanes and other aircraft as instruments of warfare, "thus excluding the possibility of a new horror to civilization, and added peril to life," is among the recommendations of the British Peace Society for consideration at the next Hague conference.

The other suggestions of the society, to which Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey has promised to give careful consideration are: Provision of a general treaty of obligatory arbitration; establishment of an arbitral court of justice; declaration of immunity of private property at sea in time of war; abolition of purely commercial blockade, that is of places which are not fortified; prohibition of explosive mines, at least in waters lawfully used by neutral ships; an agreement to put a check on the growth of naval and military armaments.

The recent placing of extra night-watchmen on duty in and around Buckingham palace was not due altogether to fears of a suffragette attack. It was learned today that Scotland Yard had received a tip, following the announcement of the valuation of the palace's contents of $17,500,000, that a gang of international crooks which in the past few weeks had been conducting extensive and profitable operations in the West End, had planned to burglarize the king's London residence. The authorities considered the information of sufficient value to justify not only the strengthening of the ordinary guard, but also an improvement of the more or less antiquated mechanical devices employed at the palace. A complete new electric alarm system has been installed, with fixtures at each window on the garden side of the building. In this connection it is recalled that an attempt was made to break into the palace in King Edward's time. The burglars were discovered one night trying to effect an entrance at a window close to Queen Alexandra's bedroom and overlooking the garden. There were two of them and both escaped.

BOTH THEATERS O. K. AND RUNNING

Dr. Furstman Says Only Minor Improvements in General Conditions Are Necessary

Dr. J. M. Furstmann, speaking for the board of theater inspectors, made the following statement to The Tribune today:

"I desire to revise the impression that must have been given by a story published last evening in which it was stated that the Dome and Star theaters would not be granted licenses until certain improvements were made. The essence of the story was true, but it was an injustice to these two theaters because of two facts, as follows:

"Only four of the eight theaters were mentioned, because up to that time but four of the eight had made application for license. Had all been mentioned, the story would have read that six of the eight had been asked to make changes. Thus the appearance was given that specific theaters were run under conditions that were in fact general with a majority of theaters.

"In discussing improvements to be made the term 'insufficient ventilation' should have been used rather than the broader and somewhat more offensive term, 'unsanitary.' The theaters mentioned are clean, and I regard the Dome, despite the suggested change, as more than ordinarily safe from the fire protection standpoint. With the changes to be made both theaters will be right in both particulars.

"I understand that the fan at the Dome was purchased under the misapprehension that it was an exhaust fan. It is not, but we have the prompt and courteous assurance of the management that a proper fan will be installed.

"It should be remembered that the ordinance under which these changes are authorized went into effect only yesterday morning, and the owners are not to be placed in the light of delinquents in the matter. It is the purpose of the board of theater inspectors, under the ordinance, to secure the best possible conditions, and we have found no inclination on the part of the proprietors to demur.

"I make this statement in a spirit of fairness to the theaters; it is not a correction, but an elaboration, and the incident merely shows how a perfectly true story, partially told, may become entirely misleading.

"The board will issue the license with the condition that the changes suggested be promptly made, and if any theaters are closed it is their own voluntary act and not that of the board. Both the Dome and the Star, I understand, are open for business."

FINE DAY FOR FLIGHT

LIGHT BREEZE AND CLOUDLESS SKIES FOR AERO-BOATS' TRIP ACROSS LAKE MICHIGAN

GARY, Ind., July 8.—Aviator Tony Jannus, one of the aviators who started from Chicago in the flying boat race this afternoon, fell into Lake Michigan several miles off shore, according to a telegram received the police here this afternoon from Beckwith Haven, who started immediately following Jannus. Haven wired from Michigan City, Ind., Motorboats have put out to find Jannus.

CHICAGO, July 8.—A light breeze that scarcely ruffled the surface of the lake, cloudless skies and the weather man's word that "all is well" greeted the entrants in the 900-mile Chicago to Detroit flying cruise when they sped out over the lake today in the final tests before starting the long reliability run.

Aero enthusiasts, aeroplane manufacturers and designers and a score of sportsmen who are considering taking up water skimming as a new diversion mingled with a big crowd of the merely curious who gathered along thes lake front to watch the last spins. The Chicago and Columbia Yacht clubs held open house for society folk who flocked to witness the start of the cruise, announced for 12:30 p. m.

But five of the twelve original entries were scheduled to start.

Jannus carried with him as mechanician, J. A. McCulloch of St. Louis. Havens' aid was J. R. Berclanck. Jannus and Haven sped past the starting buoy at almost the same instant, rose from the surface and in a few minutes disappeared from sight of the 40,000 spectators who lined the lake front.

Johnson made two attempts to start. He replaced his broken propeller with a new one, but on his second effort had engine trouble and returned before reaching the starting line.

Officials of the cruise announced that Glen H. Martin, whose machine was damaged yesterday, will be allowed to start on Thursday and fly direct to Mackinac without appearing in any of the regular contests.

ALTHOUGH DAISY MARKHAM HAS $250,000 OF NORTHAMPTON'S MONEY, SHE PLANS ON RETURNING TO THE STAGE BEFORE LONG

Daisy Markham and Marquis of Northampton.

Although Daisy Markham, the actress, has just received $250,000 from the Marquis of Northampton, the settlement made in her breach of promise action, she plans on returning to the stage soon. She is very pretty, and this fact together with her affair with the marquis, should make her a great drawing card.

In addition to the quarter of a million, the marquis will have to pay all the costs of the action, which total about $50,000. Never before has a woman been granted so much in a breach of promise action in England.

It is said that some happenings after the engagement constituted aggravated circumstances which induced the marquis to settle for an unprecedented sum.

LAMAR DEFENDS SELF ON GROUND OF PURE MOTIVE

dence that Lauterbach had lied and they fell into the trap. It was an open game and I got what I wanted."

Here Senators Reed and Overman both rebuked Lamar for his personalities, and he apologized, saying that he only wanted to tell the actual facts.

"You see, senators," Lamar resumed, "I felt certain that Ledyard knew it was Lamar talking and not Palmer. My ear has become so perfectly attuned that I could hear him putting branch telephone lines on. I called Ledyard up and offered him the entire national government in partnership with Morgan & Company, with the exception of the president. You see I knew my man. I knew his nature. Then I went to Mr. Lauterbach and sent him to Mr. Ledyard because I knew Ledyard would think he had Lauterbach in a lie."

Rebuked Again

"Hold on, sir," broke in Senator Overman, "I want no more personalities. If you do not proceed in an orderly manner I will excuse you from the stand."

Walsh protested against excusing Lamar, declaring that he wanted to cross examine him.

Senator Reed got Lamar to declare at length his belief on public questions getting him to say that it would be wrong for any congressman to be influenced by anything outside of his duty.

"Then," demanded Reed, "entertaining these views, you did not hesitate to make it appear that Senator Stone and Speaker Clark, these men, whom you did not know, were willing to enter into a damnable outrageous deal with Morgan & Co., did you?"

Evasion Fails

Lamar fenced and tried to evade the question, but Reed persisted and the witness finally admitted it.

"And you did this thing," continued Reed, "knowing that if Mr. Ledyard believed it he would have communicated it to his business associates?"

"I did, yes.'

And you knew that if these people believed that Senator Stone and Speaker Clark were people willing to make such a deal it would ruin their character?"

Lamar started an explanation, but Reed demanded a yes or no answer. Lamar said he could not answer in that way and Reed had the question read three times. Lamar finally said:

"I answer it no, because it could not be confirmed unless some one went to Senator Stone or Speaker Clark and if a representative of Morgan & Co. went to either of them what would happen would be perfectly apparent."

"That is not an answer," shouted Reed. "I want a responsive answer."

"Well, I knew Mr. Ledyard would realize that the program was absurd. And I knew that Ledyard was aware of the Palmer imposition before Lauterbach went to him. I did not expect Ledyard to give that program any credence whatsoever, and I knew that Lauterbach would be caught in a trap by Ledyard. In my mind it was better to fight in the open than slow death."

"So you sent this man, 68 years old, bearing an infamous message which he must have known was infamous on the very face of it, to his enemy because you wanted to help him?"

"I certainly did. I wanted to bring this man Ledyard into the open and I did."

"That being so," continued Reed, "just tell us why you planned this scheme."

Details the Plan

"Well, Ledyard had said Lauterbach and myself were blackmailers. I knew he would try to catch us in a trap. So I planned this, making it very plain that we did not want money. We wanted to drag this conspiracy out into the open so that Mr. Lauterbach and myself could submit ourselves to the acid test. That was all of it, I tell you."

"Did you plan to expose this so-called $80,000,000 forgery that you allege took place in Union Pacific when you planned this explosion you have told us of?" demanded Reed.

"That was never my plan," replied Lamar.

"One of your objects was to restore Lauterbach to the good grace of the Morgan firm. Now what advantage would have accrued to him if you had been successful?"

"He wanted it. It was the dearest wish of his heart and it would have benefited his practice."

"How often did you discuss this with Lauterbach?"

"A great many times."

Lamar denied emphatically that at any time there was any intention to extort money from any one. He denied knowledge of any plan whereby Lauterbach was to get a "reasonable fee" for his work in bringing Morgan & Co. into harmony with the democrats.

"Then Lauterbach dictated that part."

"He must have. I certainly did not."

Tells of Alleged Forgery

"Tell us how you found out about this alleged forgery in Union Pacific?"

"Well I checked it out from an official transcript."

"Where did you get your figures?"

"I got some from Poor's manual and other information I secured from Thomas Gibson of New York, to whose service I am a subscriber."

"And all information you have on this subject was obtained in this way?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where were you when you discovered all this?"

"In Mr. Lauterbach's office."

"And didn't you and he plan this all out and didn't you then begin this investigation?"

"Oh, nothing of the sort. I had received this information from Gibson a long time. When Judge Lovett had testified it came to me in a flash that Mr. Gibson had furnished me information about the Union Pacific a long while ago. I got the sheets Gibson had sent me and the Poor's manual and confirmed my belief that this forgery had taken place."

"Why did you do this?"

"I wanted it to get back to Mr. Ledyard and help the explosion along."

Called Up Oil Counsel

Lamar also admitted calling up General Counsel Elliott of the Standard Oil company again impersonating Representative Riordan. He claimed his object in this, as in everything else, was to aid Lauterbach's rehabilitation.

"I wanted to get Lauterbach into friendly relations with Jacob H. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.," he said.

"Did you think this plan would work?"

"Well, I was not very hopeful."

"Were you just running amuck over the telephone?"

"No, sir; not at alli. Mr. Schiff is the leader of the Hebrews in New York. On his whim depends the standing of nearly every Hebrew in that city. And I believed that if Mr. Lauterbach could get in touch with Mr. Schiff it would aid him professionally," said Lamar.

Nearly Ready for Mulhall

With Colonel M. M. Mulhall, confessed chief lobbyist and strikebreaker of the National Association of Manufacturers; former Congressman James Watson of Indiana, and a score of the men in public life named by Mulhall in his public charges on hand ready to testify, the senate lobby inquiry expected to reach "pay dirt" today.

For nearly a week Senators Overman, Reed and Walsh have been carefully going over the mass of documentary evidence submitted by Mulhall. It has been arranged so that the colonel can take up his operations as a lobbyist in chronological order. He has promised to tell everything he knows about the manner of influencing legislation.

The committee's plan for this inquiry are carefully arranged. It intends that he shall tell his story without interference, implicating everyone he desired. Then each person so mentioned will be called in order and permitted to give his version of the entire matter.

When the session opened today the committee was not certain how soon it would reach Mulhall.

Lauterbach was kept under interrogation by the committee until midnight last night without clearing up any of the disputed points. His entire story was a remarkable series of contradictions. On only one point was he certain and that was his denial that he was a party to any blackmailing plot.

There is plenty of evident friction in the committee which may yet result sensationally. Senators Reed and Nelson are at swords points, and last night Nelson interfered several times to save Lauterbach from the Missouri solon. This ill feeling is expected to come to a head when the Mulhall charges are taken up.

JUDGE PULLS BEARD BUMPED BY HAMMER

CHICAGO, July 8.—Justice of the Peace Albert Blessman of Forest Park was struck on the head with a hammer last evening by Joseph Ratner in the latter's store at 506 Beloit avenue, Forest Park. The justice was not seriously hurt, but Ratner was locked up. The police refused information about the trouble and called it "a little family trouble."

Mrs. Reuter declared the justice quarreled with her husband over the price of a desk and struck him and threatened to kill him, and that her husband merely defended himself. She declared Blessman pulled her husband's beard, tearing out a portion of it.

STREET OILING NOW COMPLETED

Six Miles of Improvements Made by Commissioner Falk; Will Oil Street Car Tracks

The oiling of the streets ordered by the common council was completed yesterday by Street Commissioner George Falk and all are now open for traffic. Four carloads of oil was distributed on seventy-two blocks or about six miles of streets. The oil costs four and five-eighths cents a gallon and it cost three-fourths of a cent a gallon to apply it. The 32,000 gallons of oil applied to the streets this summer is of an exceptionally good quality according to a staemen made by Commissiner Falk oday.

The streets which have been oiled are as follows: King from Sixth to Seventh; Vine from Twelfth to Sixteenth; Fifteenth from State to Cass; Fourteenth from State to Madison; State from Sixth to Twelfth; Market from Seventh to Twelfth; Tenth from Badger to La Crosse; Tenth from State to Cass; Cass from Fifteenth to thirteenth; Jackson from Fourth to Twelfth. On the north side the following were oiled: Kane from Clinton to Livingstone; Avon from St. James to Clinton; Clinton from Caledonia to George; Berlin from Clinton to Gillette; Charles from Clinton to Gillette; George from Logan to Gillette; and Charles from Clinton to St. Paul.

Another carload of oil is expected to reach the city this week to be applied on the street car tracks. It is expected that one carload will be sufficient to oil the streets between the tracks on all the lines in the city.

SENATOR'S RELATIVE ATTACKED BY NEGRO

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Still unnerved by her experience, Mrs. May Jorgensen, a sister-in-law of Senator Poindexter, of Washington, was unable to identify any one of half a dozen suspects rounded up by the police, as the negro who in broad daylight yesterday attempted to choke her as she was walking near her home. Senator Poindexter is incensed at the frequency with which negroes have been attacking white women on the streets here, and indicated today he may introduce a bill making the law with regard to assaults more stringent in Washington.

Miners Fire At Ohlney Mining Camp In Riot On Cabin Creek

TWO MEN ARE THOUGHT DEAD

Sheriff Will Try to Handle the Situation Without Help of the Governor

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 8.—Sheriff Bonner Hill today sent reinforcements to the Ohlney mining camp, a Consolidated coal property on Cabin Creek, where last night rioting broke out and nearly 1,000 shots were fired at the camp from the hillsides. Firing began when forty men, who had refused to join the strikers were leaving the mine and continued throughout the night.

After a conference during the night with Governor Hatfield, the sheriff decided to make effort to handle the situation without appealing to the governor for help. Two miners are today reported missing by Supt. Harry Davis. They may have been added to the coal car death list, which has mounted above fifty during the past year.

CARRIER PLUNGER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Mail Man Who Bucked the Market Cuts Wrists When He Loses Savings

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 8.—Henry W. Michel, who, though a mail carrier, has for two years retained a membership on the Merchants' exchange, attempted suicide in a toilet room of the exchange this morning, following several days reverses on which he is reported to have lost his lifetime savings of $4,000.

A pool of blood spreading on the floor attracted the attention of an attendant and led to the discovery of the man after he had slashed both his wrists with a razor. Arsenic poison was also found on the floor.

Michael resigned his position as carrier last Monday and today appeared on the floor of the exchange in carrier's uniform for the first time.

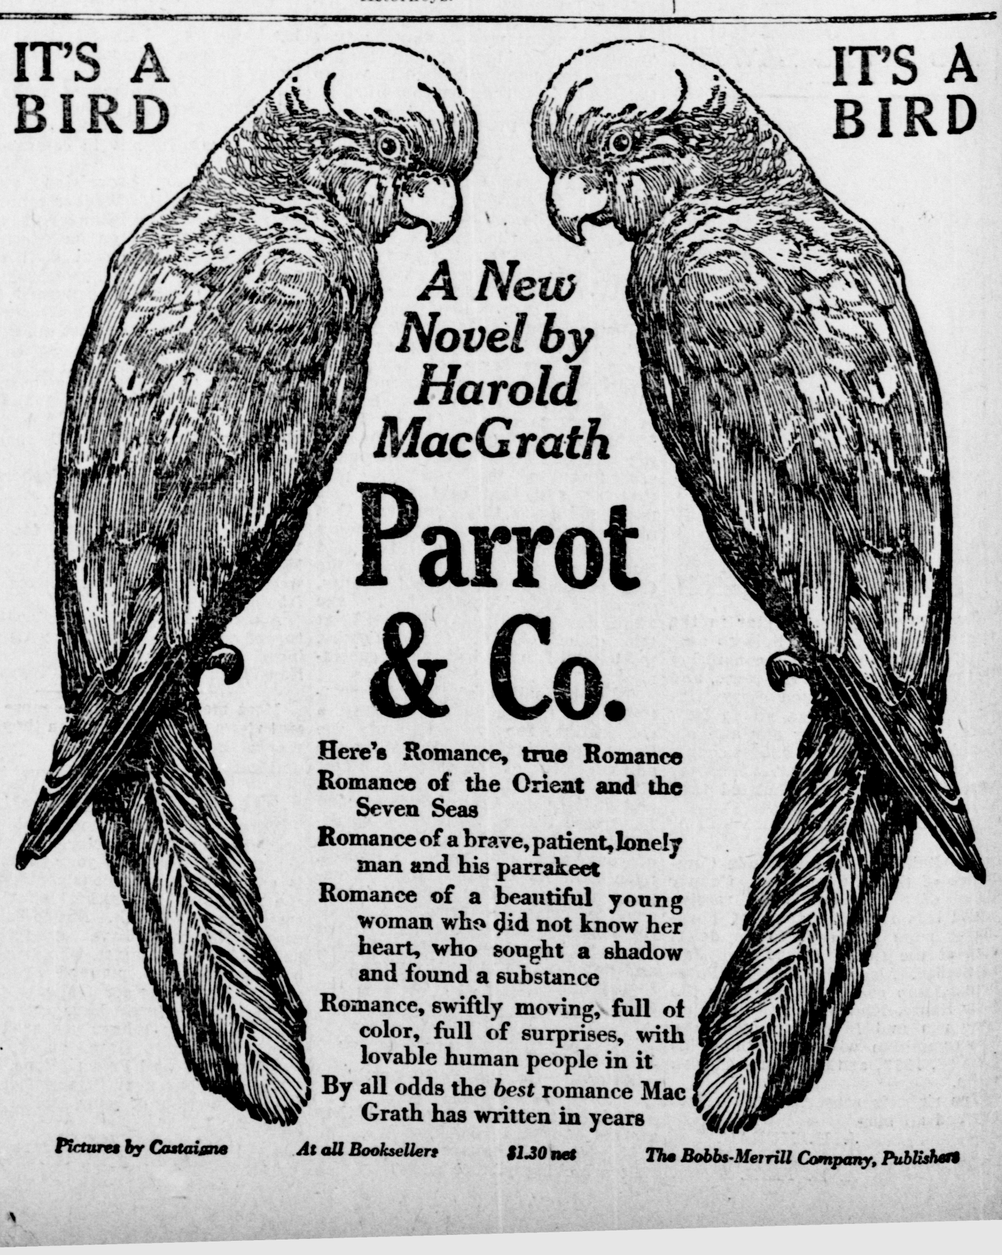

In his pockets were found letters addressed to President Wilson, Vice President Marshall, Speaker Champ Clark, Governor Major and the St. Louis newspapers.

CLUE TO TRAGEDY?

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 8.—Up to noon today no trace had been found of the owner of the canoe found drifting in Lake Michigan near Whitefish bay late yesterday. Life savers feared that the owner of the boat drowned although no one has been reported missing. The canoe was picked up about a mile and a half off shore.

GETS $250,000 FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

Daisy Markham, an actress, who was in the United States several years ago, though her acting was not so good that she is recollected by many, has just won $250,000 from the Marquis of Northampton, a young man, who fell in love with her. When the boy's father told him he must not marry and finally compelled him to quit the actress, she brought suit. That was settled the other day, and by the terms the young lord, or rather his father, was compelled to pay the woman not only a quarter of a million, but the heavy costs of the suit.

Stomach on a Strike

We all ask too much of our stomachs. For days, weeks and months we eat at irregular hours, overload our stomachs, eat too rapidly and are careless as to whether our food is well cooked or digestible. So far as the stomach is concerned, we show it little or no consideration until one day we find that the stomach has gone on a strike. We sit back in despair. The stomach is rebellious to the degree in which we have abused it. No amount of coaxing, careful dieting and regular hours for eating have the least effect.

The proper treatment for stomach trouble is understood by very few sufferers. The symptoms seem to show that something is wrong with the stomach. The trouble in reality is deeper. The loss of appetite, discomfort after eating, nausea, gas and pains have little to do with the stomach or food, but are directly caused by the blood which your careless habits have made impure. The proper treatment then is to build up and cleanse the blood. A thorough trial of will do this well. You can take them with every confidence that they will make your blood new and pure.

Sufferers who have tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills recommend them enthusiastically. A few such endorsements are given in our diet booklet, which will be sent free. It also treats of constipation.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists at 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2.50 or they will be sent, postpaid, upon receipt of price by the

MISS PANKHURST GETS A SENTENCE

Given Dose of Same Medicine Handed Mother and Says She Will Hunger Strike at Once

BURN ANOTHER COUNTRY MANSION

Destruction of Beautiful House with Priceless Tapestries Laid to "Arsonettes"

LONDON, July 8.—The stirring scenes which marked the arrest of Miss Sylvia Pankhurst last night were all but equalled in Bow street today when the militant suffragette was arraigned. The court demanded that Miss Pankhurst give bond guaranteeing good behavior, or go to jail. She steadfastly refused, and when sentenced to jail jumped to her feet shouting: "I'll hunger strike! I'll hunger strike!"

Gets Three Months

Miss Pankhurst was sentenced to prison for a term of three months.

Many suffragette sympathizers were in court, but there was no demonstration aside from that of Miss Pankhurst. She was immediately taken away to start serving her sentence, and her friends predicted it would soon be necessary for the government to order her release under the "cat and mouse" law.'

Miss Pankhurst was arrested last night after she had delivered a stirring address. The meeting had been in progress for more than an hour before Miss Pankhurst appeared. She had apparently traveled some distance and her hair was streaming from under a wide straw hat, which had slipped to one side of her head. Other speakers had intimated that Miss Pankhurst might need protection while speaking.

"We mean to have a revolt. I and my friends are out to have a few riots," were the first words of Miss Pankhurst. "Look out for your opportunities and see that you take them even if I am in jail."

Burn Country Home

HORWICH, Eng., July 8.—The handsome residence of Sir W. H. Lever at Rivington Hill was burned today by suffragettes, destroying rare tapestries and valuable pictures, the loss being estimated at $100,000. The residence was unoccupied.

Placards were found about the place, one of which bore a message addressed to the king. Another note, addressed to Lever, said: "If you had been as loyal to us as Lancashire is to the king this would not have happened."

The message to the king said: "Wake up the government and give us reason to be loyal. Then try us."

RUSHFORD, MINN.

A storm of cyclonic propensities passed over this city last Friday night, leaving in its wake a wide swath of ruined shade trees and further up on the ridge, moving barns and other buildings several inches from their foundations, blowing down windmills and raising general havoc. The damage done in this city was considerable, the worst being at the Elite theater, where one of the large plate glass windows was blown completely in, shivered into a thousand pieces. All the tents of the Tanner Carnival company were laid flat on the ground, except the cook tent, the members of the troupe being awakened from their sleep by the cracking of the tent poles and a veritable deluge of rain. neighboring homes harbored the unfortunate people till morning, when, with the good humor characteristic of the traveling troupe, they once more pitched their tents, hung their wet clothing to dry and went about the day's work as if nothing had happened. However, when it was found that the three largest rattlesnakes had escaped from the box where they were kept, a lively skirmish ensued till they were at last rounded up in the lower part of the city. The company left on the morning westbound freight.

The smokestack of the powerhouse was toppled over by the storm of Friday night, but as no one was near it, nothing serious resulted.

Mrs. Bent of La Crosse is the guest at the Dr. Williams home on Stevens avenue.

The open air vesper service conducted in the park Sunday evening was greatly enjoyed by all who attended and this included a goodly portion of the citizens of this city. The bandstand was occupied by a choir composed of several from the Presbyterian church and also some from the Evangelical Free church, Rev. Bantly and Mr. Bjornson both conducting the services. It was not possible to secure the band this time, but it is hoped that next Sunday's service will be able to include them also. Better seating facilities will also be provided next time, as not knowing how the idea of open air services would be received, it was hardly deemed necessary to provide chairs for this first service. During the warm weather these open air services will be continued.

Mrs. Virgil Hall of Past's Falls, Idaho, who has been the guest of the Rowlee and Fenstermacher families for a number of days, has returned to her home.

The Ladies' Missionary society of the Presbyterian church of Rushford will meet in the church basement next Saturday, July 12th, the ladies who entertain being Mrs. Isabelle McKay and Mrs. Ellen McKay. A cordial invitation is extended all to come.

Word from Minneapolis is to the effect that a good sized party of sightseers are headed for Rushford, but does not state whether it is Prof. Lehnert's "Seeing Minnesota First" company or not. This latter company had planned to make the run here from Winona last week, but after the severe storm of last Friday, concluded that the roads would be in pretty poor shope for the autos, and decided upon going over to Owatonna instead. It is problematical, therefore, if they will come here at all.

Rushfordites will this week have their first opportunity to see and hear the recent great invention, the talking moving pictures, as Mr. Nicholas has now secured a number of the films and will run them at Tuesday evening's show.

John Brae of this vicinity went down to La Crosse Friday to transact business.

Martin Fossum and A. G. Anderson of Rushford have also been recent visitrs in La Crosse.

Miss Anderson of Leroy, who has been attending the Teachers' Training school here, left for her home today.

Quite a furore has been raised by the writeup in a nearby city daily of a cave of considerable extent, near this city. Upon the north side of Magelsson's bluff there is a cave of which quite a bit has been said but so far as we are able to find out, at present, it is not large enough to admit of one's full height being raised. Rushford has, however, a beauty spot (one of many), which has drawn to the city many who appreciate the beautiful in nature, namely, "The Indian Chapel." This is situated about one and a quarter miles almost straight west of here and is an old worshiping place of the Indian tribes who many years ago made this valley their home. Dug from the side of the sandstone cliff, with a number of large pillars supporting the roof it presents an appearance which is at once grand and inspiring and to one who makes a study of history, it is an almost inexhaustible source of material. Countless names are carved upon the tall pillars, names which are now familiar to the world through their owners making a place for themselves in the different walks of life.

BIG ELEVATOR BURNS

PORT HURON, Mich., July 8.—The plant of the Point Edward Elevator company, located north at Sarnia, Ont., on the St. Clair river, was burned on Monday with a loss estimated at $350,000, partly covered by insurance. About 60,000 bushels of wheat and 220,000 bushels of oats were destroyed.

CRIMES COVER CRIMES?

JACKSON, Miss., July 8.—That Brown Hopkins, a negro who was expected to be the state's star witness in the investigation of wholesale graft in Mississippi, purposely was called to his door and assassinated is the charge of the probing committee which also charged that penal farms were burned to prevent a check on looting. The state committee announces that it has confessions from three officials and that twenty-five arrests will follow.

OUR GREEN TAG SALE.

WE WILL SET A NEW STANDARD FOR THIS SALE—WE PROPOSE TO MAKE ITS MONEY-saving opportunities of greater importance to you than ever before. We are going to show you that the little overworked word "SALE" really means something in this store. We are going to give 20 per cent or one-fifth off of the already low prices on merchandise that we sell the year 'round, which is without question the finest that this country's foremost makers are able to produce.

It is a well known fact that this is the only STRICTLY ONE PRICE Clothing House in this city—where you and your neighbor pay exactly the same price for the same piece of merchandise—the only fair way to do business. If you'll stop and think you'll realize that it is impossible for the two and three price merchants to have their lowest price marked on their merchandise, and therefore they can say 25 and even 30 and 35% off --a simple matter, of course. But we say, is it not better to really, honestly get 20% off and know that you are getting a full $1.00 worth of merchandise for 80c?

IN THIS SALE EVERY HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX and "L" SYSTEM and CONTINENTAL SPECIAL SUIT

is included. We still have a goodly assortment of these Suits left over from this season's spring stock, but we expect to close them out in short order, so we advise you to come early, while assortments are at their best. First choice is always preferable.

WOMAN DOCTOR HITS MILITANTS

Says Mrs. Pankhurst and Her Followers Are Crazy and Should Be Locked Up

DENVER, July 8.—"Ladies who slip away from pink teas to toss dainty little bombs and use dynamite under public buildings for the sake of acquiring the ballot are crazy. Emmeline Pankhurst, who frightens her gentlemen captors by refusing to eat when they lock her up is insane."

At least that is the way Mrs. Dr. Elizabeth Hanks of Illinois, prominent woman member of the American Institute of Homeopathy, diagnoses the case. Dr. Hanks is here attending the annual convention of the institute.

"Put the militant suffragette in a sanitarium," she said positively. "I do not like to see competition between men and women. That is what it means so often today when women get out into the world to work. Women put chips on their shoulders for the men to knock off, and then call the men 'mean.' Women segregate themselves when they go into the commercial world—when they ask for the ballot. Women are smart enough to hold the ballot. But I doubt if they would appreciate it if it were given them."

Upon the question of the minimum wage for women, Dr. Hanks said: "The minimum wage will be unfair to employers. The girl who is worth one dollar should not receive eight dollars a week. It is unfair to the eight dollar girl. The one dollar girl is incited to better work because of the more competent girl's wages."

ADDISON CELEBRATES

Along it for a mile are residences, one bank, three churches, one hotel and three blacksmith shops. There is one policeman but no lockup. All residents but one are property owners. Addison was founded by Peter Augustine who fled from Holland as a Hugenot.

PLAYER WHO HIT MANAGER M'GRAW

Ad Brennan, the Philadelphia National league baseball player, who struck Manager John J. McGraw, of the New York Giants, and beat him badly after a recent game in Philadelphia, has been suspended for five days and fined $100. McGraw at the same time has been punished for his part in the row. He was suspended for five days, but President Lynch of the National league, thinking his part was not so serious, failed to levy a fine.

ELKS CAPTURE ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Thousands Numbered in Herd Which Gathers for Big Annual Convention

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July8.—The streets were literally covered with confetti and colored streamers today. There were sounds of bands and marching companies from distant points were adding their numbers to the thousands of Elks now crowding the hotels and rooming houses of the city.

Preparations were under way for the big floral automobile parade tonight and it is expected to be one of the most gorgeous in the history of the city, as Rochester wishes to justify its name of the "Flower City."

Denver is making a determined effort to win the convention for next year, and indications point to a successful campaign. California seems to have first call for the 1915 gathering and Atlanta is laying wires for the meeting of 1916.

SHOOT UNDER NEW FIRING REGULATION

CAMP DOUGLAS, Wis., July 8.—Shooting under ideal conditions, the First battalion of each regiment fired the record course under the new firing regulations Monday morning, followed by each of the second battalions in the afternon. As the firing was not completed until a late hour the high scores will not be announced until today. Sergeant Funk, Second infantry, was high in the morning with a total of 233. This is out of a possible 250, there being five scores, as follows: Slow fire, 300, 500 and 600 yards, and 200 and 300 yards rapid fire.

START ON BANKING BILL

WASHINGTON, July 8.—A start upon committee consideration of the Wilson-Glass-McAdoo currency bill was made today by the house banking committee. Although openly disapproved by some democratic committeemen, study of the measure section by section was finally consented to. A meeting of the full committee to discuss the question of holding more hearings is scheduled for Friday. Only the democrats of the committee met today.

CALLS CONFESSION FAKE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 8.—A confession given to the police late yesterday by Simon Helfinstine, that he had killed seven persons in Ohio between 1896 to 1900, was faked. Helfinstine repudiated the entire confession today. He admitted he had made it in the hope of being removed from California and of evading trial here on charge of passing worthless checks. He was originally arrested on that charge.

ST. LOUIS, July 8.—When Clifton T. Bloom, a drug clerk, realized he had sold a deadly drug instead of a mild one, he sent an ambulance to the home of Hugh A. Crouch asked for spirits of aconite and the clerk by mistake gave him tincture of aconite, a dangerous poison.

Design for Embroidering Round Collar and Revers for a Boy's Russian Suit

By May Manton

No. 657. Design for Embroidering a Round Collar and Revers for a Boy's Russian Suit.

The scalloped edges are to be padded and buttonholed. The flowers and leaves can be worked either solidly or as eyelets. The stems are to be outlined.

To pad the scallops, work chain stitch between the lines, heavier at the center and lighter at the points; or, cut a skein of thread and apply two or more strands over the center of the stamped pattern, keeping within the lines, tack here and there in couching style, gathering the threads closely at each point of the scallops; then buttonhole closely over the foundation.

SUGGESTIONS FOR TRANSFERRING THESE PATTERNS.

THE window pane method is perhaps the simplest and is particularly successful when the material is thin such as batiste, lawn, or handkerchief linen, the best plan is to pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the window pane and with a sharp pencil trace the design on the fabric or else lay the material on the pattern on top of a table or other hard surface, and carefully trace the design with a well pointed pencil, the design may also be transferred to heavy material by using a piece of transfer or carbon paper, to be placed between the pattern and cloth, using a sharp pointed pencil to secure a clean line.

Transfer Embroidery Patterns Supplied by Mail

FOR the benefit of our readers who prefer transfer patterns to work by instead of tracing the design on this page by any of the methods which we have suggested, we have arranged to supply transfer patterns of any of the embroidery designs which are featured, for 10 cents each.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, July 8.—The stock market opened quiet and firm.

11 a. m.—A rally that was anything but vigorous marked the latter part of the first hour. The slight recovery was only a brief one and trading again became dull. It lasted long enough to show, however, that the failure of the First-Second National bank of Pittsburg has occasioned but little liquidation so far on account of New York stock exchange houses with Pittsburg connections. Westinghouse advanced from 55 to 57, recovering from the sharp decline late yesterday. Five United States bonds, carrying 2 per cent, sold at 99, a low record price.

Noon—The market was firmer.

Chicago Grain Review

CHICAGO, July 8.—A selling drive continued to bear down on wheat today and after a weak opening July declined fractionally and September lost 5-8c in the morning session. Abroad pessimistic crop reports from Russia and France, a decreased visible supply and war in the Balkans caused an advance but favorable crop news in America overruled the Liverpol cable locally.

Corn started firm, the weather map showing high temperatures and little rain over a large portion of the corn belt, but toward noon selling became more general, with further declines in wheat and each month lost 3-8c.

Oats had a weak undertone in sympathy with wheat, but the failure of rains to materialize in some sections bolstered July to a point 1-8c under the day's opening. September lost 7-8c.

Provisions were strong and generally higher on higher hog prices, lard alone shading easier.

Wheat had further decline of 1-4 to 3-8c in the afternoon and closed weak, the other grains maintaining noon prices until the close.

Provisions were a trifle easier in the afternoon and closed at about the day's opening prices.

CHAUFFEUR CAUSES ARREST

RACINE, Wis., July 8.—Reaching through the wicket at the ticket window of the Chicago & Northwestern station here yesterday noon, a sneak thief grabbed a bag containing $400 in gold and then walked leisurely away before the theft was discovered. Going to a taxicab company a block away, he hired a machine to take him to Milwaukee. He tipped the driver $70 for getting him to Milwaukee in fast time and this aroused the chauffeur's suspicions the moment he heard of the robbery after returning to Racine.

He told the police of his "fare" and picking up the trail, they followed the fellow from saloon to saloon in Milwaukee and finally placed him under arrest this morning.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 8.—Formal charges that Supreme Court Justice Cohalan did not adhere strictly to judicial ethics were inquired into today when the legislature started its investigation. Beef valued at $50,000 was taken out of the cooling department on the third floor and shipped to Chicago and other points. Over 1,000,000 pounds of cured meat was threatened.

A number of firemen were overcome in the dense smoke caused by the burning grease.

NO PUNISHMENT FOR WALL STREET "WOLF"

Members of the senate lobby investigating committee have been vainly trying to find some law under which they may punish David Lamar, the New York stock broker who testified before the committee that he had impersonated Congressmen Riordan of New York and Palmer of Pennsylvania in telephone conversations.

In Wall street Lamar is known as the "wolf." He gets on the nerves of captains of finance who would like to remove him from New York's financial district.

THO COMING FROM BRUSH, COLEMAN SOON SHOWS CLASS BEHIND BAT FOR PIRATES

Robert Coleman.

"Diamond Dick" Kinsella, scout for the New York Giants, is not willing to admit that he has made many baseball mistakes in his life, but it is a peculiar fact that three young ball players whom he did not think would develop have recently graduated to the big beat, and the same club, Davenport (Ia.) of the Three-I league, has profited each time.

Robert Coleman, now the property of the Pittsburg Pirates, was peddled by Kinsella to Davenport for a paltry sum, and on June 11 was sold to Fred Clarke at a handsome profit. Clarke thinks so much of the youngster that he has used him in a great many games since.
